ABOUT RIC

Ric graduated from St. Lawrence College as a Business Systems Analyst. After graduating, Ric spent 1996 to 2015 working full-time as a Systems Analyst and then an Adaptive Technologist for St. Lawrence College, while also a part-time instructor in various fields, including computer science, economics and Wind Policy in Canada.

Ric has had extensive experience in Municipal politics. He has served on the Loyalist Township Municipal Council for 22 years, being re-elected five times and serving as councillor, deputy mayor and mayor. During that time, he worked to build new residential and commercial areas, including the Loyalist East Business Park, which has added 21 new businesses. Loyalist has seen one of the highest residential growth rates in Eastern Ontario.

Ric understands that Hastings-Lennox & Addington must begin work to restore itself after two years of pandemic disruptions. He knows that many people are concerned about economic recovery, the rising cost of living, and the debt taken on by businesses and individuals to get through the past two years. His primary focus is on helping small and medium businesses, restoring jobs and working towards bringing in more affordable housing to the Riding.

Ric's time in municipal politics has taught him that rebuilding the economy starts with developing healthy communities that can create and sustain secure, well-paying jobs. This is done by assisting small and medium-sized businesses and providing incentives to invest in, rebuild, and start new businesses. Small and medium-sized businesses employ at least 70% of the Canadian workforce and create 85% of all new jobs.
